COSBY PRAISES FINE ARTS' WORK

Executive Officer of Commission Says Recommendations Prove Valuable.

SAVING IS EFFECTED

Many Valuable Designs Passed Upon and Cost of Work Greatly Reduced.

Plans and designs numbering more than a hundred, and valued at approximately $30,000,000, have been acted upon by the Commission of Fine Arts since its creation. In 1911, according to a statement issued yesterday by Col. Spencer Cosby, secretary and executive officer of the commission, in which the work of that body is reviewed.

During the first half of the fiscal year 1912, twenty-four submissions were received, and all but two disposed of. "The work of the commission has been of co-operation rather than of criticism," asserts Col. Cosby. "It has aimed to accomplish results by advising with commissions, architects or artists individually whenever modifications or changes in the matter under consideration seemed desirable. Its recommendations have resulted not only in marked improvement in the beauty and artistic character of the monuments and public buildings planned in Washington during the last two years, but also in a saving of many thousands of dollars to the government. Its advice has almost invariably been in the direction of simplicity and against ornateness. If its recommendation is followed in the proposed armory, the cost of that building will probably be reduced several hundred thousand dollars.

Expert Advice Unnecessary.

"It has advised against the purchase of various paintings alone (which were inferior works of art) which would have cost the government $21,000. Prior to 1910, in considering the plans and models for any monument and during the execution of the work, many hundreds of dollars had to be spent in each case for expert advice. It is probable that the saving in this item of expense alone has been more than the sum total of the appropriations made for the commission during the time it has been in existence. Some of the most important cases in which it has rendered such expert advice are the Lincoln memorial, the competition for the Perry memorial at Put-In-Bay, Ohio, the German memorial at Germantown, Pa., the Fort Recovery monument, the Guilford Court House monument, the monuments in Washington to John Paul Jones, to Gen. Grant, to Commodore Barry, &c.

"The commission has rendered assistance, upon request, to the President, to committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, to the Secretaries of the Treasury, of War, of the Navy, of the Interior, and of Commerce and Labor, to the officer in charge of Public Buildings and Grounds, to the District Commissioners, to the Isthmian Canal Commission, to various State commissions, and to other officers charged by law with the determination of questions of art. These matters included not only passing on the artistic qualities of paintings and models for statues, but upon the proper location of public buildings and monuments, upon problems of traffic, and upon utilitarian features in the treatment of bridges, thoroughfares, plazas, and parks.

"Congress has amplified the duties of the commission by authorizing it, by act approved August 24, 1912, to make report regarding the artistic character of the structures of the Panama Canal. The act approved December 8, 1911, providing a suitable memorial to the memory of the North American Indian in New York Harbor, subjects the design for that memorial to the approval of the Commission of Fine Arts."

LOST BOYS FOUND.

Amos and Edward Norton Fail to Get Far from Home.

Amos and Edward Norton, aged six and nine, respectively, who disappeared from their home in Mount Rainier, Md., Saturday night, were found yesterday afternoon by the sons of Henry Cleveland, a resident of Mount Rainier. The boys had not strayed more than half a mile from their home.

Alarmed by their failure to return home Saturday night, Amos Norton, the father of the boys, appealed to Chief of the Fire Department W. H. Venneman for assistance. The volunteer firemen responded. The neighboring country was scoured by the firemen, and an all-night search was futile.

The boys left home, it is said, because they had been corrected by their father. They slept in an old barn during the night.

BAGGAGE SIZE DEFINED.

Charges Authorized for Parcel Exceeding Certain Limits.

The baggage smasher has found a friend in the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has promulgated baggage rules that will considerably lighten the labors of that individual. These rules are to become effective June 1.

The principal clause sets forth that carriers reasonably may make a charge for the transportation of baggage that measures more than forty-five inches in length, and that any piece of baggage exceeding seventy-two inches in any dimension shall not be accepted for checking.
